FLINK RECEIVES MAS AWARD

St. Stanislaus is pleased to announce that one of its seniors, Charles William Flink II, has merited first place among the Mississippi entries in the 24th Annual Westinghouse Science Talent Search.

On Friday, April 23, 1965, at the banquet of the Mississippi Academy of Sciences at the Edgewater Gulf Hotel in Biloxi, Chuck received a victory trophy for his work with Video Transmission of Microwaves.

Chuck's project consisted of modifying surplus radar equipment for transmission of TV pictures.

When the project was completed, Brother Godfrey, teacher of physics at St. Stanislaus, administered a test required by the Westinghouse Corporation designed to indicate Chuck's ability to understand science.

This award is granted to the student who has successfully completed and entered a scientific paper of research and who has been judged by the Mississippi Academy of Science to possess substantial scientific ability and to have exercised considerable skill in the communication of results

TEEN-AGERS SPEAK OUT ON CIGARETTE SMOKING

Teen-age students anticipated governmental regulation of cigarette packaging and advertising by three months.

The Institute of Student Opinion, sponsored by Scholastic Magazines, Inc., polled a sampling of 4,338 high school students in public, private and parochial school systems throughout the country last spring.

Of this number, 30.9 per cent state the government should require tobacco manufacturers to specify on their packages that the contents are dangerous to health.

Only 17.3 per cent are of the opinion that the government should continue research into the deleterious effects of smoking to ascertain without a doubt that cigarette smoking is harmful, while 16.3 per cent would like to see the government prohibit the sale of tobacco to all persons under 21 years of age.

The second part of the poll concerned the role of private enterprise--tobacco manufacturers and their advertising media--in attacking the problem.

A large 46.7 per cent urged the tobacco industry to intensify its research to eliminate the dangerous elements in its products; 27.3 per cent advocated a boycott by the various advertising media (newspapers, magazines, radio and TV) of tobacco advertising, unless the advertising clearly stated the dangers to health; and 12.5 per cent wanted a complete boycott of all tobacco advertising.

The Institute of Student Opinion, sponsored by Scholastic Magazines, Inc., has been conducting nationwide surveys of teen-agers since 1943, and is a part of Scholastic's recently organized Scholastic Research Center under the direction of Richard S. Boaz.

BIO. CLUB ENDS ACTIVITIES

Summarizing the activities of the IOA biology Club, the members constructed a shelf for specimens of almost every phylum of the animal kingdoms.

These specimens were placed in the order of complexity from the lowest to the highest phylum.

Members of the club also helped select and order the specimens used for dissection during the year.

All odd jobs and the like done in the lab were performed by the club members.

As a final project, the members demonstrated to the S.J.A. students the internal organs of a frog, a worm, and a crayfish which have been injected with latex.

FOCUS ON THE FUTURE

One of a series of articles on careers prepared by Loyola University in New Orleans.

CAREER IN ENGLISH

In more and more areas machines can do the job better, but in the really important tasks it takes a man. The study of literature is designed to keep men as unlike machines as possible.

English is now seldom regarded as a nice but impractical college major. Employers realize that it is a study which by deepening students' personalities prepare them for many different careers.

Through literature we become aware of actual experience other than our own, learning about many aspects of "the human conditions" that would otherwise be a closed door to us.

English is a large part of the broad humanistic education businessmen look for when hiring, especially in the fields of management, advertising, and selling.

Business is people-to-people work, communication made easier with the greater perception, depth, and compassion a liberal arts graduate may have over a man with mere technical training.

Graduates in English can go into the fields of writing, editing, publishing, research, or public relations.

Newspapers, magazines, publishing houses, radio and TV stations, and libraries welcome them.

ENTRE LOS LATINOS

Estimados companeros, aqui estamos de nuevo a informandoles los eventos de la comunidad Latina en el colegio.

No les habiamos tenido informados los meses pasados a causa que no estuvo en funcion el periodico.

Esperamos que hayan salido bien en los exámenes de el quinto term, y que les haya servido de algun bien y tengan satisfaccion de ellas.

Aqui estamos en las ultimas semanas del tiempo escolar y esperamos que hayan tenido un ano progresivo hacia el futuro y que los tengamos el ano entrante aqui en el colegio.

Para los Seniors Latinos les deseamos una vida y un futuro progresivo y les deseamos suerte en sus respectivas careras.

El Papa del Hermano encargado del periodico se murio, espero que lo recuerden en sus oraciones.

Teaching English to youth in college or high school is a career rich in rewards: good salaries, ranging from about $4700 for a beginning high school teacher to about $6000 for a new college professor; community respect; and the joy of teaching others what he has learned. Graduate education is a must for college teaching.

THE PARLOUS PENCIL By Gary Granello (Conclusion of a continued short story)

Prelude:.....Having slain Otto, the janitor, Seymour left his body on the office floor.

The physician will surely diagnose "death as a result of heart failure." So nice and neat, no corpus delecti. Otto is gone and I will go merrily on my way.

Free from even the wildest shred of suspicion." Seymour was feeling very happy, in fact, he felt like whistling, but that would be out of order. His only care was the disposal of Oscar, and that would be comparatively easy for such a clever fellow as he.

After he reached the door to the main laboratory where he, Irene, and Oscar worked, Seymour stopped to comb his hair and straighten his tie. Perhaps he would end Oscar's miserable life tonight, he thought. Then he opened the door but did not go in. He merely stood there shocked at what he saw.

Irene was in Oscar's huge arms. After they had been discovered, Oscar grunted and softly pushed Irene away. Irene began straightening her hair as Oscar advanced towards Seymour who still stood in the doorway with his mouth agape. "You little runt," he said, "Don't you know better than to barge in like that?" "Yes Irene added, "don't you believe in knocking?"

Oscar faced Seymour squarely and muttered a profane and insulting remark, fortunately, unheard by Irene. At that moment Seymour's hand went to the pencil in his shirt pocket. He stepped back a few feet and drew a dead bead on Oscar. However, his heel twisted on the doorway molding and the deadly beam fired true to Irene's heart.

As Irene slumped quietly to the floor, Oscar's face took on an expression of surprise and anger. That expression remained when he died.

In his anguish, Seymour turned the deadly shaft to his chest. He fell softly to the floor between the two corpses, raising the total of the room to three.

The parious pencil rolled in Seymour's hand and finally slipped off the end of his index finger. From there it rolled across the floor until it lay up against the leg of a nearby chair.

That night, the chief of police was rudely awoken from his sleep by the irritating ring of the telephone. When he and his men finally understood the frantic pleadings of the night watchman, they sped toward the laboratory as quickly as possible. They found three cadavers with all the same diagnosis from the autopsy ward.

For the following 3 months the police and FBI questioned, analyzed, and investigated to no avail.

The new janitor, an old man about seventy-two, slowly shuffled about the dark building making his final rounds for the day.

The door to the lab where the three people were found dead, was locked. He pulled out his ring of keys and opened the door. Everything had been gone over with a fine-tooth comb by the FBI men. However, the insignificant little pencil did not merit their careful inspection.

It still lay where it had fallen, only now it was pushed underneath the desk by the chair. The janitor stooped with great effort and picked it up. After locking up, he started his long walk back home, fingering the shiny mechanical pencil in his pocket.
